

North Wales Cancer Patient Forum

“The Forum enables me, as a patient, to give something back to our local cancer services”

A voice for people affected by cancer

Working together to help improve our local cancer services

Who are we?

The North Wales Cancer Patient Forum is open to anyone who has been affected by cancer, including patients, their family and friends.

What do we do?

- We work together with health professionals, using our views, experiences and skills to help improve patient-centred cancer care across North Wales.
- We share information. Our website and social media bring together details of local cancer services, support, news and events.

How can you get involved?

- Tell us about your experiences of cancer care. What worked well and what could have been better? Even small changes can make a big difference.

- Participate via email, or come along to one of our Forum meetings in Wrexham, Bodelwyddan or Bangor. Meet other patients, carers and health professionals who are working in partnership to help shape cancer care in North Wales.
- Visit our website. Find us on Facebook / Twitter. Help us share information that may be useful for people living with cancer
